I have been to the /stopuppyfarming link for the $250,000 consultation process but am not happy to fill out the form in its format.

It is incredulous to me that this amount of money is being wasted and could be put to better use for example supporting the RSPCA.

Other Australian States have already past the legislation to stop farming. The Labor Government took this issue as a promise to the election and many voters like myself took it that it was going to pass into law as swiftly as possible.

My experiences with consultation processes (having been on a Local Government one) is that they are expensive, time consuming, fail to provide feedback and offer little or no solutions to existing issues.

Often consultations appear to be purely an expensive PR display or in the words of William Shakespeare "Much Ado about Nothing."

Just get on with it and Stop Puppy Farming!

Diane
